

SAY CANDY TRUST EXISTS

Wholesale Confectioner Invokes Sherman Law and State Courts.

TO APPEAL TO WHITMAN

Jobbers and Manufacturers Alleged to Have Formed Combination to Drive Small Dealers Out.

Two suits were begun on Saturday by Pinus Mullman, a wholesale confectioner, against Henry Heide, Greenfield & Sons, the Novelty Candy Company, James A. McClurg & Sons, A. Slusser & Co. and Hawley & Hoops, all candy manufacturers who, it is alleged, have combined with other manufacturers, as well as jobbers, to monopolize the candy industry and to restrain interstate trade and commerce.

The other suit was brought in the Supreme Court, New York County, against Morris Waldman, Michael Tenzer, Charles Lubowsky, Joseph Schwartz, Bernhard Horn, Solomon Vogelsohn and Harry Vogelsohn, who are wholesale confectioners, and who, it is alleged, constitute the executive committee of the Confectioners' Club of New York, an organization through which Mullman asserts they are monopolizing and controlling the candy business.

Charles Dushkind, attorney for Mullman, said that these suits are only the beginning of a vigorous campaign that will be made to break up the candy combine. Besides the numerous suits for damages that will be instituted against them, he says, both Attorney General Wickersham and District Attorney Whitman will be appealed to by the independent tradesmen for action.

Mr. Dushkind says that, unlike the big trusts, the candy combine is monopolizing the industry through the means of the so-called membership organization. Each state has an association of jobbers, and these various jobbers' associations have a national association called the National Jobbing Confectioners' Association, organizations, with a National Confectioners' Association, with an arrangement between the manufacturers' association and the jobbers' association that the manufacturers will not sell their products to non-members of the jobbers' association, while the jobbers' association shall not handle the products of non-members of the manufacturers' association. In this manner they not only succeed in keeping new concerns out of the business, but they are constantly driving some of the old ones out by suspending them from the association for cutting prices or for some other infraction.

In 1903 Mr. Dushkind began criminal proceedings before Judge Wyatt, in the Court of Special Sessions, against the officers and directors of the New York association, and all of the thirteen directors were convicted under Section 163 of the Penal Code, but sentence was suspended upon the promise of the defendants to disband, and now Mr. Dushkind says the same people who were instrumental in the prosecution of the criminal action nine years ago are the leaders of the present combination.

PARK PARROT DRUNK

Some One Gave Bird Corn Soaked with Whiskey.

When Donald Burns, the ornithologist in the Central Park menagerie, found Dick, the centenarian parrot, stretched on the floor of his cage yesterday afternoon he thought the eventful career of that bird, which is a family heirloom, had suddenly terminated from old age.

But you never can tell. That was Burns's observation moment later when he reached inside the parrot's cage and lifted the prostrate bird. As he did so Dick suddenly became very much alive, though he lost all sense of propriety and used language he had formerly been thought incapable of handling.

It wasn't Dick's breath that verified Burns's suspicion that the venerable bird had tumbled off the water wagon with a big thud. But it was several kernels of corn and "pills" of bread the bird man found in the bottom of Dick's cage that absolutely convinced him Dick had left the straight and narrow path of righteousness as a result of some prank. Burns nibbled one of the kernels of corn and found it saturated with whiskey. The small pieces of bread rolled up in pill fashion were likewise soaked with it.

"It wasn't Scotch whiskey, either," said Donald, in telling the other keepers about the plight of Dick.

The parrot had not become sober when the birdhouse was closed for the night, though it had consumed quantities of water. It slept on the floor of the cage most of the day.

This is the first time in several years that any such prank has been played on a parrot. Half a dozen kernels of corn soaked in whiskey overnight, Burns said, would get any parrot "stewed."

PURPLE PORPHYRY SCARCE

Commissioner Stover May Send to Egypt for It.

Park Commissioner Stover has been disappointed again in his endeavor to get slabs of purple porphyry for the pavement to be placed around the base of the Bethesda Fountain in Central Park. His first disappointment in that direction was when he sought to purchase "Cesar's Bathtub," a purple porphyry antique, and slice it up to make the desired paving blocks. The bathtub, however, was not purchasable for less than $3,000.

Incidentally, the Commissioner had a long talk with J. Pierpont Morgan on the subject of bathtubs of the time of Caesar, for the financier is said to have one of the Caesar tubs. Then the Park Commissioner got on the track of porphyry quarries in Massachusetts. At least, he heard they were such, but yesterday he said museum officials in Boston had told him the quarries had been misrepresented.

"I intend to get some porphyry to complete the design," said the Commissioner, "even if I have to get some from the tomb of an old Egyptian monarch. There is a good deal of purple porphyry in that country."

MENTAL HYGIENE CONFERENCE

A mental hygiene conference, the first of its kind ever held, will open at the College of the City of New York on Friday. There will be a public exhibit showing the purpose, methods and results of the new movement, and many leading American psychologists, physicians and educators will be in attendance and will lecture. The exhibit was shown at the recent International Congress of Hygiene in Washington.

The conference will be held under the direction of the national committee on mental hygiene and the mental hygiene committee of the State Charities Aid Association, which has been carrying on a campaign on this subject for two years.

It has been found that 25 per cent of the insane who come to the New York asylums are curable, and that avoidable causes of insanity account for 50 per cent of the cases treated. The conference will last for eight days.

Perhaps the most striking feature will be the mental clinic, at which the "association tests," the tests of Binet and Simon and other modern methods of study of the mind may be seen in actual practice.
